Take a Color Walk

Dive into the world of color with picture books like Laura Vaccaro Seeger’s Green and Lemons are Not Red. After exploring the colors, go on a “color walk” around your house or neighborhood and find objects that are green, blue, red, yellow, etc. Encourage your child to look for the objects on his or her own and point them out to you.

You can even make some binoculars out of paper towel tubes! Playing “I Spy” games can help eye tracking, an important skill that aids in reading words across the page.

What this is teaching:

Noticing differences between colors helps to identify differences between letters later.
