Welcome to fall!

At KDL, we are big fans of the written word. It’s because we know that words are powerful; they matter.

Words heal.
Words entertain.
Words educate.
Words transform.
Words transport.
Words change lives.

I want to encourage you to share your words with us and others by entering the Write Michigan Short Story Contest. You could be the next published author in the KDL collection. Learn more at writemichigan.org.

May your words and mine be kind.

Sincerely,

Lance Werner
Executive Director
WonderKnook

New and improved library playspaces are on their way this winter! Explore a tree house at Caledonia Twp., barter for goods at the trading post at Englehardt (Lowell) and slide like a fish at Krause Memorial (Rockford). There’s so much to explore with these exciting Montessori-inspired play pieces, and every branch will be unique. As part of the revamp, KDL is proud to offer a game-style map of all the WonderKnook spaces for curious minds and for those who wish to visit more than just their local branch. Children who visit at least five will receive a special prize.

Books for Newborns

KDL is partnering with select local health organizations to provide board books and information about KDL to babies and new parents to promote early literacy. KDL hopes to connect more children and families with crucial resources earlier in life and more than ever before. To learn more, check out kdl.org/babies.

KDL Online Store

Be on the lookout for a brand-new online store featuring KDL merchandise launching later this fall! Now, you can declare your true love for the library from the rooftops – or at least from an array of attractive mugs, socks, tote bags, pens and more. Though exact merchandise is still in the works, there is sure to be something for everyone... just in time for the gift-giving season.

Did You Know?

The KDL Grooves vinyl collection, with over 700 album titles, includes everything from classic rock to classical, jazz to hip-hop. The collection also includes high-end headphones and portable turntables. Learn more at kdl.org/grooves.
Staff Picks

The Flatshare by Beth O’Leary

“Leon and Tiffy share a flat but have never met because Leon works nights and Tiffy works days. They communicate through Post-it Notes scattered around the flat, and their strange living situation works for them. But soon they find themselves falling for each other, and everything becomes more complicated.”

Samantha | Caledonia Twp. Branch

The Ash House by Angharad Walker

“Although this is a youth chapter book, as an adult I found the story suspenseful and chilling. A group of children are living unsupervised in a Gothic mansion, waiting three years for a phone call from the Headmaster and desperately trying to avoid a house call from the Doctor. A page-turner with a fantastic final scene!”

Liz | Amy Van Andel Library

The Library Fish by Alyssa Satin Capucilli

“This is a delightful book about a fish that lives in a library. One day, the library is closed for a snowstorm. The fish has a wonderful day of adventures in the closed library. The Plainfield Twp. Branch has a fish tank, and this story would be so relatable to our patrons, who can easily imagine our building being closed in a snowstorm.”

Jaime | Plainfield Twp. Branch

The Power of the Dog by Thomas Savage

“I’m not typically drawn to westerns, but this story doesn’t have the usual shootouts and stagecoach robberies. As tension grows between characters, the book becomes a psychological drama disguised as a western. It does still explore the hyper-masculine identities of the 1920s American West. Savage finds a way to unforgivingly expose the weaknesses and flaws of his characters while still leaving room for breaths of empathy and understanding. Perfect for fans of Kazuo Ishiguro, Truman Capote or Cormac McCarthy.”

Anna | East Grand Rapids Branch

The Flatshare by Beth O’Leary

“Leon and Tiffy share a flat but have never met because Leon works nights and Tiffy works days. The Ogress and the Orphans by Kelly Barnhill

"Simply put, this is the best book I’ve read in the last year. Barnhill’s story of what it means to be a neighbor and the power of love transcends traditional children’s literature. Everyone, regardless of age or interest, would be happier, wiser and more loving if they read this amazing book."

Josh | Service Center

Beautifully Me by Nabela Noor

"This is a beautiful book that shows the effect that adults have on children when they are wrapped up in diet culture. It features a young Bangladeshi-American girl, and not only are the illustrations breathtaking, they include a diverse bunch of people, including children with disabilities. I wish that I had books like this to read 40 years ago!"

Shannon | Krause Memorial (Rockford) Branch

Touching Spirit Bear by Ben Mikaelsen

"I read this book because my mentee through Affinity Mentoring was reading it for school, and it was an interesting read. Instead of serving his time in jail, a young boy is banished to an island to face the wrongs he committed as well as his anger. This book is about self-reflection and how returning to nature can help with that."

Anne | Wyoming Branch

Leave Only Footprints by Conor Knighton

"This is a great book covering all of our National Parks without spending the high cost of gasoline to get there. The travelogue, by a member of ‘CBS Sunday Morning,’ takes readers on the journey made over the course of a calendar year as a way to heal the author’s broken heart. Much of Conor’s inner dialogue and encounters with other park visitors are very funny and honest while including the historical facts and personalities of each park. It’s not something I’d normally pick up (because I generally find travelogues to be dry and kind of self-important), but I think this one is worth the time."

Why My Family LOVES Storytime (And Yours Should Too)

By Katie Blakeslee, Service Center

Your local storytime offers a range of activities geared toward helping your child and you fall more in love with reading and learning — together!

Storytime Engages Learning through Movement and Play.

Children learn best when they can use their brain and their body at the same time. After all, the brain is a muscle too! My 18-month-old son and 4-year-old daughter love storytime because they associate it with dancing, singing and other sensory activities. Some storytimes even have a bubble machine dance session at the very end. Our favorite!

Storytime also gives children a safe place to explore how to socialize with other children. From sharing toys and books to following directions, storytime is one of the first places my children began to see themselves as part of a larger group. I have seen both of my children become more self-aware — and more aware of others — through cooperative play at storytime.

Storytime Encourages a Lifetime Love of Reading.

Storytime forms positive foundational memories with reading and the library, memories that may foster a lifelong love of reading. Why is this important to me? Because more and more studies show that reading is one of the better coping mechanisms for regulating emotion, reducing stress, improving cognitive performance and building empathy. A love of reading is one of the most important gifts I can give to my children. The good news is, it’s never too late to start giving it.

Storytime Won’t Send You Home Empty-Handed (Literally).

Most library storytimes end with a special craft based on the stories read that day. In my home right now, we are especially attached to a paper plate version of the hungry fish from Lo Cole’s Ten in a Hurry. My daughter loves to use the plate to reenact how the big fish gulped all but one of the little fishes down and then burped them back up! In doing so, she is demonstrating important thinking skills like comprehension and retention. When she brings the “fish” into her play and has it eat (and burp up) her other toys, she is demonstrating application. These are skills she will build upon throughout her schooling and use for the rest of her life!
Storytime Is Economical.

My local library is one of the few places I can go with my family and not be expected to spend money. Storytime is and will always be free and fun! Not to mention, it gives this tired mama a small break while my children are fully engaged in something other than a screen.

Storytime also expands our literary horizons by introducing us to new subjects, stories and authors we may never have discovered otherwise – and we don’t have to break the bank to indulge these discoveries, either. Thanks to the library, we have been able to check out books en masse and read them over and over again and return them when we’re finished. Whenever my child moves on to something new, I feel good knowing these books are being read and enjoyed by other children in Kent County, rather than sitting idly on a shelf in my home.

Storytime Is for Everyone.

Yes, everyone! It’s OK if your kids are a little wiggly (or a lot). It’s OK if you’re a few minutes late or if you don’t have a library card yet (get one!) or if your child woke up on the wrong side of the bed that morning. New this fall, KDL will also begin to offer select storytimes in American Sign Language. For more sensitive participants, KDL offers Sensory Storytime content, available online. That’s the beauty of the library: it accepts everyone where they are and as they are. The library says, “You belong.” And where we find belonging, we find joy. Storytime is joy.

Check out kdl.org/events to see when and where there is a storytime near you!

ASL Storytime
Cascade Township Branch,
Mondays, Sept. 12 – Nov. 14
(No Storytime on Oct. 3 and Nov. 7)
10:00 AM – 11:00 AM

We’re excited to host storytime in American Sign Language and English. Enjoy rhymes, stories and activities as we learn and play together. Everyone is welcome – deaf children, hearing children and their families.

Sensory Storytimes

Designed for children that may need extra sensory support, Sensory Storytime combines traditional storytime components with sensory elements to enhance the experience... all from the comfort of your own home. Visit kdl.org/sensorystorytime to learn more.
Enjoy the Process

By Ty Papke, Branch Outreach and Programming Specialist

As temperatures drop outside, many of us begin our endless pursuit of indoor activities to keep our children entertained and engaged without plopping them in front of a screen all day. While they may not be as physically active as during the summer months, we can strive to at least keep their minds active by exercising their creativity with arts and crafts.

Fortunately, the internet provides us with infinite craft ideas. Unfortunately, many of these seemingly-simple crafts turn out to be more frustrating for kids than fun. I can’t tell you how many times I’ve been excited to discover the perfect craft – whether for my kids at home or for a library program – only to find out the kids can’t manage to execute the craft as well as the adult who demonstrated it so gracefully in the video. This becomes even more problematic with a group of children in different stages of development. It will come as no surprise that a 5-year-old can wield a pair of scissors with far greater skill than a 3-year-old.

It’s natural for children to get frustrated when their hard work doesn’t yield the same result as the example craft, or even the kid next to them. To overcome these challenges, it can help to focus more on the process rather than the product. For this reason, process art has been growing in popularity in recent years.

Process art allows children to create in a relaxed setting, without the pressure of making something that’s expected to look a certain way. Process art can take many forms, but always emphasizes the process of creating instead of the final result. While it may end with a unique piece your child is proud to display, it’s just as likely to end with a sloppy mess that gets tossed in the garbage (an added bonus for those of us who have long since run out of space to display our children’s artwork).
Process art allows children to create in a relaxed setting, without the pressure of making something that’s expected to look a certain way. A variety of mixed media can offer endless possibilities for creation. Your kids can paint with feathers, create a forest out of sticks and play dough, gather all the scrap paper in the junk drawer to make into a sculpture, paint with water on the sidewalk or try making letters in shaving cream on a cookie sheet. Embrace the mess and embrace the process.

However, process art can also be done with something as simple as a pen and paper. A fun and simple activity I do with my youngest daughter requires just two pieces of paper, two writing utensils and a timer (I use my phone). We each begin with a pen and paper. Setting a timer, we each draw for one minute.

When the timer sounds, we swap papers and reset the timer and add on to the other person’s drawing. We continue drawing in one-minute sessions, rotating papers each time, resulting in two silly drawings that combine our creative efforts. To add a literacy element, I ask her to tell a story about each drawing. While this activity has never resulted in a product worth framing, it has produced joy in the process of creating together.

I encourage all who are interested in exploring process art to search for ideas online. You will be amazed by the hours of entertainment available to your kids with items already in your home or classroom.

10:00 AM – 12:00 PM
Writing good stories is an art that requires creativity and understanding of the craft of writing. This workshop will focus on developing strong characters and descriptions, using effective plot devices and a narrative arc, and the internal cohesiveness of the story.

The Art of Description... and Not Going Overboard with Janyre Tromp

1:00 PM – 2:00 PM
Good narrative description is one of the keys to excellent writing, but navigating the path between too much and too little detail isn’t always an easy task. In this workshop you'll walk alongside a veteran editor and author to explore keys to creating effective “Show Don’t Tell” description.

Ready to Seek Publication? with Maryann Lesert

2:30 PM – 3:30 PM
This session will briefly tour publishing options for book-length works – agents and traditional publishing, medium and small “indie” presses, hybrid publishers and self-publishing. Participants will leave with a list of sites and tools to help them prepare to submit book-length works.

College App Essay Workshop: A Three-Part Series
Kentwood (Richard L. Root) Branch
Sundays, Sept. 25, Oct. 2, Oct. 9, 2:00 PM - 4:00 PM
Writing college application essays can be daunting because so much rides on them. Students will learn what admissions advisors are looking for and how to craft an essay to stand out. We will use a step-by-step process with help and feedback to make the task manageable. Each session is different and will build on the previous; please plan to attend all three.

For High School Teens.

Songwriting Workshop
Plainfield Twp. Branch,
Saturday, Oct. 29, 12:00 PM – 3:00 PM
Max Lockwood, a local musician, songwriter and winner of the 2015 ArtPrize jurors award, will discuss the basic elements of songwriting, inspiration and creation. You will learn the differences between songwriting and poetry and enjoy a fun, interactive exercise.

Ages 16 & up. Space is limited; first come, first served. Doors open 15 minutes before the program begins.

What others are saying about Write Michigan:

“For the past two years, I’ve competed in the Write Michigan contest. This year, I also volunteered to review stories. I loved reading the work of young writers and being able to offer (hopefully) helpful feedback. As a writer, I appreciated getting the feedback and having the opportunity to compete with writers from across the state. Write Michigan gave me a goal to work toward and helped motivate me to make my work the best it can be.”

Kevina Clear, Teen Judges’ Choice Winner

“There’s something about a competition that spurs creativity and productivity, even if you wouldn’t consider yourself a competitive person. For me, the Write Michigan contest was the catalyst for diving much deeper into creative writing than I’ve previously gone. Writing literally opens up new worlds — worlds you can shape any way you like. It’s very liberating. There is not enough public encouragement for creativity, and that is why I’m so thankful for Write Michigan.”

Will Miedema, Adult Readers’ Choice Winner

“Black and White

My Experience with the
Kent County Teen Film Festival

By Ethan Gough, KCTFF Winner

The Kent County Teen Film Festival has meant a lot to me over the years. I’ve gotten so much joy out of having my work included in the yearly lineup, and even more satisfaction out of watching all of the other entries. I feel that this generation has been blessed with such easy access to film making tools – we literally carry cameras in our pockets wherever we go – and thanks to KDL, people in my age group have a place where we can submit our films and have them be seen.

I am eternally grateful to everyone involved in putting the festival on. They’ve done so much for us young filmmakers, and I treasure the memories I’ve collected while submitting films over the past few years. Winning Best Live Action Short for the 2020 ceremony was a particular highlight. I had never received an accolade of that caliber in my life. I was never on the winning sports team, and I never excelled at anything that wasn’t related to storytelling, so finally receiving recognition for something I was passionate about was a very formative experience for me. It caused me to see a bit more value in myself, and my confidence was given a much-needed boost.

I think every teen in Kent County should enter this festival. It’s a great way to get your short film out there, and it is so much fun. I can guarantee that if you’re truly passionate about filmmaking, you will love the Kent County Teen Film Festival!

The staff at Centennial Securities loves doing good work in the community... and they love reading, too!

Jeff Wierenga
Senior Vice President

I read often, and yet I still read the least in my family.

I prefer to read non-fiction, especially biographies and books about the financial world.

My favorite authors are James Andrew Miller (former Literary Libations guest), Adam Grant and Walter Isaacson.

My favorite books are Last Call: The Rise and Fall of Prohibition by Daniel Okrent, The Price You Pay for College by Ron Lieber and The Storyteller by Dave Grohl.

When our kids were younger, we used to attend storytimes and other library programs for younger kids. Now, I have kids who are teen volunteers and help with those same programs.

One of our children looks forward to the first of every month when he can use his refreshed monthly allotment of Hoopla borrows. We have also used the library PerkPass and the Michigan Activity Pass in the past. I have family members who have checked out hotspots because internet access is unavailable where they live.

I’m a big believer in the saying, “Leaders are readers.” If there’s a leader you look up to, odds are they are a voracious reader.

Ingrid Bergsma
Client Relations Coordinator

I like to read non-fiction, suspense, classics, chick-lit, memoirs and fiction. I love summer beach settings for my summer reading.

I have a wide variety of favorite titles, some of which include Frankenstein by Mary Shelley, The Scarlet Letter by Nathaniel Hawthorne, The Perfect Storm by Sebastian Junger and Open by Andre Agassi.

A close friend from college and I recently reconnected, and something we have adopted is choosing a book to both read and then chat about when we next speak – a mini-book club of sorts. It has been a sweet little addition to our rekindled friendship!

I listen to audiobooks all the time! Having access to audiobooks through the Libby app has really helped me keep my “reading” going during seasons when I just can’t get some time to sit down with a book. I always have a book going when I am in the car. I also listen when I am cleaning or doing projects around the house.

Reading makes a person more informed about the world, other points of view, other locales, etc. It can create common threads between you and a stranger you just met.

Kim Ross
Receptionist

I like to read historical fiction, Christian fiction, Christian non-fiction and romance.

A couple of my favorite authors are Terry Blackstock and Karen Kingsbury.

Reading gives insight into places I would like to go. Reading self-help books gives knowledge into an area of life that I am working to improve.

I like to check out movies from the library.

Reading is a great way to find answers or go on an adventure!

Communities by Design
Thursdays, 6:30 PM, Amy Van Andel Library (Ada)

What is the role of civic design in creating more equitable, just and sustainable communities that we’re proud to call home?

Our community is experiencing a renaissance of municipal development with long-range visions of vibrancy, growth and enrichment for all residents. But there is no cookie-cutter approach as needs and goals are varied. This interactive, in-person series features experts who will examine the topic of civic design, looking at models globally to challenge our ideas of what works locally. This series is presented in partnership with World Affairs Council of West Michigan.

Who should attend?
Municipal leaders, planners, visionaries and residents who cherish a home community that is equitable, just and sustainable.

Sept. 29 | Civic Ecology and the Laudato Si’ Action Platform
Sister Damien Marie Savino, F.S.E., Ph.D., and dean of Science and Sustainability at Aquinas College, will discuss the Laudato Si’ Action Platform and how it relates to civic ecology and engagement.

Oct. 6 | Commons, Collaboration and Civic Design
Dr. Erik Nordman, professor and author, will discuss shared resources, often called “commons,” and Elinor Ostrom’s groundbreaking ideas for sustaining a shared resource to create vibrant urban communities.

Oct. 13 | At the Water’s Edge: Reconnecting Cities to Their Waterfronts
Dr. Ken Yocom, professor and author, will give national and international examples of urban waterfront revitalization to offer insights and opportunities for understanding some of the successful strategies for enhancing waterfront conditions while prioritizing public access.

Summer Wonder Success!

Over 15,000 people completed Summer Wonder! It was a summer of reading, exploring, learning and a host of amazing programs. Families had fun following clues and locating the “You Found Curi” signs in eight different parks. Thank you to Kent County Parks, all the program presenters and the participants for making Summer Wonder such a success. See you next summer!
